I have 2 success stories to share:

1. I'm finishing a web-based mod_perl/javascript (client side) contact management system with heavy Apache::DBI and Registry use. This system is for a "fortune-500 pharmaceutical (sp?) giant". It is replacing an unmanageable (their description) Lotus Domino application.

2. In production, a mod_perl server for gathering web traffic statistics for an up and coming web traffic reporting company. The mod_perl enhanced server gathers data from thousands of client and server based proxies around the world. Data is stored in Oracle using Apache::DBI. This replaced a poorly designed PHP server (poor choice using php in this scenario imho).
